

Indigenous Women Rising (IWR) - Rain Fund Texting Privacy Policy

Last Updated: August 26, 2025

Who We Are: Indigenous Women Rising (IWR) provides the Rain Fund to support Indigenous people seeking abortion care and other reproductive health services.

Why We Text: We use text messaging (SMS) to quickly and securely communicate with applicants about their Rain Fund application. This is to provide updates, request necessary information, and offer support.

We Value Your Privacy: Protecting your personal and health information is our top priority. We are committed to handling your data with respect and confidentiality.

Information We Collect for Texting:

- Phone Number: We collect the phone number you provide on your application form solely for the purpose of communicating about your application.
- Application Information: Any information you share with us via text is treated as part of your confidential application.

How We Use Your Information:

- To send you updates on your application status.
- To ask for clarifying information if needed.
- To connect you with support or resources.
- We will NEVER use your number for marketing, fundraising, or any purpose unrelated to your Rain Fund application without your explicit permission.

Who Can See Your Information:

- Your information is only accessible to authorized IWR staff and volunteers directly involved in processing Rain Fund applications.
- We DO NOT sell, rent, or share your phone number or application details with any third parties for their own use.

Your Consent:

- By providing your phone number on the Rain Fund application, you consent to receive text messages from us related to your application.

Stopping Texts:

- You can opt-out of receiving texts from us at any time. Simply text back STOP. You will receive no further messages.
- Please note that if you opt-out, we may be unable to communicate important updates about your application.
